The colonization season has opened promisingly in the south, and ludustrial agents say the year will be a record breaker for immigration. Many new mills and factories are being loexted along the lines of southern railroads, and new industries are constantly developing. Large colonies are also coming south, and thousands of people are taking advantage of the home seekers' excursions.

A change in the quality of straw buts for the Cuban and Porto Rican trade is reported by dealers this season. The goods are to be mostly of bright striking colors. Two years ago hats of this character were rarely seen in Cuba, all the women wearing black then, either for personal monrning or us an evidence of sarrow over Spanish rule. The change in fashions indicate the happier conditions which prevail in the island.

The women of Marmaton, Kan., five miles west of Ft. Scott, have organized themselves into a land of laborers for the building of the United Brethren church there. Twelve of them donned all clothes the other day and began the work of excavatlng for the foundations. Enough money to build the church could not be raised, so the women determined to take up the work and do it themselves rather than let the project be abandoned.

Few rich men work harder than John H. Rockefeller, the Stundard oil Proesus, and certainly no other New York millionnire is personally so little in evidence as he. WE MUST GROW OLD.

We must grow old! The years go by, Sometimes on wings they seem to fly: But why such haste? We know not why We only know that we grow old!

Sometimes, alasi the years they go As if with leaden feet, so slow We faint from pain. We cannot know Wherefore or why, but we grow old:

Each vanished year its own sad tale Of disappointment, were and wail, Adds to the score, until we fail, Since we grow old! We must grow old.

The broken links of life's short chain Can never find their place again; The heart will bleed when pierced will

When loved ones die, and we grow old

CHAPTER VI.

The great thoroughfare of that wonderful city, seated on more than her seven hills, and ruling the western world, was thronged from earl to earl. Gay with bunting and streamers, the tall buildings of the rival newspapers and the long facades of hotels and busipess Idoeks were gayer still with the life and color and enthuslasm that erowded every window. Street traffic was blocked. Cable cars clanged vainly and the pollee strove valiantly. It was a day given up to but one duty and me purpose, that of giving Godspeed to the soldiery ordered for service in the distant Philippines, and, though they hailed from almost every section of the union, except the Pacific slope, as though they were her own children. with all the hope and faith and pride and patriotism, with all the blessings and comforts with which she had loaded the foremost ships that sailed, yet happily without the tears that flowed when her own gallant regiment was first to lead the way, San Francisco turned out en masse to cheer the men from far beyond the Sierras and the Rockies, and to see them prendly through the Golden tiate. Early in the day the guns of a famous light battery had been trundled, deeked like some rose-covered chariot at the summer festival of flowers, through the winding lanes of eager forms and faces, the eaunoneers almost dragged from the ranks by the clasping hands of men and women who seemed powerless to let go. With their little brown earlines tossed jauntily over the broad blue shoulders, half a regiment of regular cavalry dismounted, had gone trudging down to the docks, cheered to the gateway of the pier by thousands of citizens who seemen to envy the very recrults who, only half-uniformed and drilled, brought up the rear of the colunin. Once within the massive wooden back the importunate crowd, the soldiers flung aside their heavy packs, and were marshalled before an array of tempting tables and there feasted, comforted and rejoiced under the ministrations of that marvelous successor of the sanitary commission of the great civil war of the sixties-the order of the Red Cross. There at those tables in the dust and din of the bustling piers, in the soot and heat of the railway station, in the jam and turmoil at the ferry upon their own, every cheer and comfort that wealth could purchase, or human sympathy devise. It was the one never be forgotten. At one of the flower-sleeked tables near the great "stage" that led to the main deck of the transport, a group of blithe young matrons and pretty fee and bouillon and substantials to the troopers, man after man, for our two hours. There was lively chat and merry war of words going on at the moment between half a dozen young officers who had had their eyes on that particular table ever since the coming of the command, and were now making the most of their opportunities before the trumpels should sound the assembly and the word be passed to more aboard. All the heavy baggage and ammunition had, at last, been swing Into the hold; the guns of the battery had been lowered and scenrely chocked; the forecastle head was I thronged with the red trimmed unldeal that their rivals should be allowed a whole additional hour of lingering farewells.

Lingering farewells there certainly were. Many a young soldier and many a lass "paired off" in little nooks and corners among the stacks of bales and loxes, but at the table mearest the staging all seemed gay good humor. A merry little woman with straw-colored hair and pert, tip-tilted nese and much vivacity, and complexion, had apparently taken the lead in the warfare of chair and fun. Evidently she was no stranger to most of the officers, Almost as evidently, to a very close observer who stood a few paces away, she was no intimate of the group of women who with good right regarded that talde as their especial and personal charge. Her Red Cross leadge was very new; her garb and gloves were just as fresh and spotless. She had not been ladling out milk and cream, or buttering sandwiches, or pinning souvenirs on dusty blue blouses ever since early morning. Other faces there showed through all their smiles and succiness the traces of long days of unaccustomed work and short nights of frombled sleep. Marvelous were Mrs. Frank Barrison's recuperative powers, thought they who saw her brought home in the Primes' styllsh carriage, weak and helpless and shuken after her adventure of the previous day. She had not been at the Presidio a week and yet she pervaded it. She had never thought of such a thing as the Red Cross until she found it the center of the social firmument after her arrival ad San Francisco, and here she was, the last comer, the foremost ("most forward" I think some one described (t) in their circle at one of the most prominent tables, absorbing much of the attention, most of the glory, and none of the fatigue that should have been equally shared by all.

'Adios!" she gayly cried, as the "assembly" rang out, loud and clear, and waving their bands and raising their caps, the officers hastened to join their commands. "Adios, till we meet la

"Do you really think of going to the Philippones, Mrs. Carrison?" queried a much older looking, yet vounger woman. "Why, we were told the general said that none of his stall would be dlowed to take their wires." "Yet there are others!" laughed Mrs. Barrison, waving a dainty handkereldef toward the troops now breaking into column of twos and slowly climbing the stage. "Who would want to go with that blessed old nudertaker? Lordla-bon voyage, Geordie," she ernd, blowing a kiss to the heutepant at the head of the second troop, a youth who tdushed and looked confused at the attention thereby centered upon him and who would fain have shaken his fist, rather than waved the one unoccupied hand in pertunctory reply. "When I go I'll choose a ship with a band aml brond decks, not any such cramped old canal boat as the Portland."

"th! I thought perhaps your husband," began the lady, dublously, but with a significant glance at the silent faces about her. "Who? Frank Garrison? Heavens! I haven't known what it was to have a hiesland-since that poor dear boy went on staff duty," promptly answered the diminutive center of attraction, a merry pent of laughter ringing under the dingy archivey of the long, long roof. "Wiry, the Portland has only one stateroom in it big enough for a bandbox, and of course the general has to have that, and there isn't a deck where one enable could turn a slow waltz. No, indeed! wait for the next llotilla, when our fellows go, bands and all. Then we'll sec."

"But surely, Mis, Garrison, we are told the war department has positively forbidden officer's wires from golng an the transports"-again began her interrogator, a wistful look in her tired eyes. "I know I'd give anything to join Mr. Dutton."

"The war department has to take orders quite us often as It gives them. Mrs. Datton. The thing is to know how to be of the order giving side - Oh, joy!" she saddenly cried. "Here are the Primes and Amy Lawrence-then the regiments must be coming! And there's Stanley Armstrong!"

Fur up the westward street the distant roar of voices mingled with the swing and rhythm and crash of martial music. Dock policemen and saddiers on gaard began boring a wide lane through the throng of people on the pier. A huge black transport ship lay moored along the opposite side to that on which the gans and troopers were embarked, and for hours bales, boxes and barrels had been swallowed up and stored in her capacious depths until now, over ngainst the tables of the Red Cross, there lay behind a rope harrier, taut stretched and guarded by a line of sentries, nu open space close under the side of the greater steamer and befeature of the war days of '98 that will theen the two landing stages, placed fore and aft. By this time the north tide of the broad pier was littered with the inevltable relies of open nir lunching, and though busy hands had been at work and the tables had been spread and everything on the tables began again to look fair and inviting. the good fairies themselves looked askance at their bestrewn surroundings "Oh, if we could only more everything badily over to the other side," wailed Madaio President, as from her perch on a stack of Red Cross boxes she signveyed that coveted stretch of clean, un-hampered flooring.

"And why not?" chirruped Mrs Gnrrison, from a similar perch, a tier or two higher. "Here are men enough to move mountains. All we have to do is to say the word."

mated sprite above ber. "What nonserse!" shrilled Mrs. Uirrison. "Here, Cherry," she called to a pretty girl, standing near the base of the pile, "give me my bag. I'm arm; noman enough to know that order referreil only to the street crowd that semetimes works in on the pier and steals." The bag was duly passed up to her. She east one swift glance over the heads of the crowd to where a handsome earriage was slowly working its way among the groups of prettilydressed women and children-frlet.ds and relatives of members of the departing commands, in whose helmlf, as though by special dispensation, the order excluding all but soldiers and the Red Cross had been modified. Already the lovely dark-eyed girl on the near side had waved her hand in greeting, responding to Mrs. Garrison's enthuslastic signals, but her companion, equally levely, though of far different type, seemed preoccupied, perhaps unwilling to see, for her large, oatk, thoughtful eyes were engaged with some abject on the opposite side nat even with the distinguished looking soldier who sat facing her and talking quietly at the moment with Mr. Princ. There was a gleam of triumph in Mrs. tlarrison's dancing eyes as she to k out a flat notchook and pencil and dashed off a few lines in hold and agorens strokes. Tearing out the page, she rapfully read it over, folded it and glanced imperiously about her. A cavalry sergeant, one of the home troop destined to remain at the Presidio, was leaning over the edge of the pier, hanging on to an Iron ring and shouting some parting words to comrades one the appear deck, but her shrift sepranceut through the cull roar of deep, mosenline voices and he tramp of feet on resounding

"Sorgeant!" she cried, with quick derision. "Take this over to the others in command of that guard. Then bring n dozen men and move these two tables across the pier." The cavaliymon glanced at the saucr little woman io the stuming costnine, "took lo" the gold cres. cd sabres, topped by a regimental number in brilliants that joinsed her martial collar at the round, white thro, i, noted the ribber and head and concluded he, too, would bet pin and badge of the Red 1 ross, and | ter grin and bear it. "Straight across and well over to the edge," she answered, in the same crisp tones of command Then, with total and Instant cleange of manner, "I suppose your tables should go first Madam President," she smillingly said. "It shall be as you wish about the others."

And the Red Cross was vanquished. "I declare," said an energetle official, a moment later, leaning back on her throne of lemon boxes and fauning herself vigorously, "for a whole hour I've been trying to move that officer's heart and convince bim the order didn't apply to us. Now hon did-she

"The officer must be some old-some personal friend," bazarded the secretary, with a quick feminine comprehensive glance at the little lady mov being litted up to shake hands with the carriage tolk, after being loaded with complements and congratulatious by the ladies of the two favored tables. "Not at all," was the prompt rejdy "He is a volunteer officer she never set eyes on before to-day. I would like to know what was on that paper." But now the toar of electing and the blace of martial music had reached the very gateway. The broad portals were thrown open and in blue and I rown. crushed and spin ezer by the attendant throng, the head of the column of infant, y came stroling on to the pier. The band, wheeling to one side, stood at the cutrance, playing them lo, the girls had been busily serving fruit, cof- eleared, and fresh white cloths were rafters ringing to the stircing strains of "The Liberty Hell." They were still far down the long pier, the sloping titles just visible, dancing over the heads of the crowd. No time was to be lost. More tables were to be carried, but-who but that-"that little army woman' could gire the order so that It would be obeyed. Not one bit did the president like to do it, but something had to be done to obtain the necessary order, for the soldiers who so willingly and promptly obeyed her beek and call were now edging away for a look at the newcomers, and Mrs. Frank Garrison, perched on the "Ah, but it Isn't," replied the other, carriage step and chatting most vivaciously with its occupants and no forms of the artillerymen, who had al- of faces, as though he search of some longer concerning berself, apparently, ready been embarked and were now one sufficient in rank and authority to about the Red Crass or its tables, had Jealously clamoring that the troopers serve her purpose. In less time than It takes to tell It the entire Red Cross equipage was on its way across the pier, and when the commamling officer of the arriving regiment reached the spot which he had planned to occupy with his band, his staff and all his officers, there in state and ceremony to receive the citizens who came in swarms to bid them farewell, he found it occupied by as many as eight snowy, goody-laden tables, presided over by as many as 80 charming maids and matrons, all ready and enger to comfort and revive the inner man of his mighty regiment with coffee and good cheer illimitable, and the colonel swore a mighty oath and ponneed on his luckless officer of the guard. He had served as a subaltern many a year in the old army, and knew how it was done. "Italn't I give you personal and porltive orders met to let anything or any holy occupy this space after the big gage was got abourd, sir?" he da

"You did, ser," said the unabashed lieuter ant, pulling a folded paper from his belt, "and the Red Fross got word to the general and what the Red Cross says-goes. Look at that!"

The colonel looked, rend, looked lazed, scratched his bead and said: "Well, I'm damned!". Then be turned to his adjutant. "You were with me when I saw the general last night in d he told men to put this guard on and keep this space char. Now, what d'you say to that?"

The adjutant glanced over the pen ciled lines. "Well," sald be, "if you pose any order that discriminates against the Red Cross Is going to hole good, once they find It out, you're bound beget left. They're feasting the first company now, slr; shall I have it stopped." and there was a grin onder the young soldier's mustache. The colonel paused one mement, shook his called and saw similing faces and beckinning bands in an open carriage near him, but the sight of Starley Armstrong, signaling to lilm from an other, farther away, had something doningnt about it. "With you he a minute." he called to those who first had summoned him. "What is it, Arm alming ?'s

LIGHT.

The very first requirement of the primitive man is food, the next, clothing, the next shelter and then he passes from the requirements of the purely annual body to those of a little higher plane and demands light and heat and companionship. In the proceas of evolution the very first evidence. of a development beyond the animal stage, in which man was a curnivorous beast of prev. killing and devouring, raw, animals less strong than himself, was the employment of lire for heat, for light, and later for cooking.

them - Matt 7 12 NOTES AND COMMENTS.

With this lesson we conclude the study of the sermon on the mount. Therefore verses 24-27 should be taken In connection with the text. They close the sermon and very graphically describe the two types of men in the world. Those who found their lives on the principles full down by Jesus locareet this fault in his will abide, those who refuse the words structure that for all time of eternal life will come to the close of life empty, having bullt, necording to the figure of the Master, a house on the sand, or by a like figure much tor artificial Illimitation | la common use, only a house of cards which would lengthen The lesson unalysis will follow the

The Passing of Andgment. In this mssage Jesus lays down very clearly this is a natural demand, the rule of conduct regarding censorions judgments. In life we have to judge our fellows and acquaintances tuly by passing a mental judgment can we deal fairly and honorobly, prutect our own interests and give that the world are engaged in which is the to those about us. But the work of dispelling the Jesus warns us against censorlous

And concerning censorious judg ment Jesus makes four declarations: test compound which (1) We will be judged by the same stumbard that we judge others. This is just, for if we mulie ously, or ignogive off a gas passessing rantly and unnecessarily, tulsceptesent unother's character, no judgment can be too hard for us. Another thing: We enunot see all around the affairs of this life, and in the majority of cases Ill-judgment is unealled for, 4th, 1892. Nolling was therefore we should temper with mercy whatever estimates of another's character we must make. A pany to exidoit it was third reason presents itself against tormed. Since then its rensurious judgment, and establishes the declaration of thrist, and it is found in the constitution of the human mind. It is that it is the tendemy to judge another by oneself. Therefore by judging another a man does little more than reveal his own weakness of character, besides, of course, the harm that Is done that other's reputation. Itashi says (I'salm 18-26) of fied: "With the pure Thou wilt show Thyself pure; and with the forward Thou wilt show Thyself forward." Even the Holy God is thought obstinute, perverse and unjust by men whose lives are not in accord with the Hiving teaching.

(2) We are not to pick three with others, while there is that within our own hearts that needs correction (verse 31. (3) If we try to remove the beam from our own eye, we will have little time for the mate in a bruther's eye.

(4) In verse 6 desus udils an addltional reason for not passing judgment. The one of whom we are upt to Ilduk hardly may be fully as bad as we laive thought him, but why cast pearls before swine? An old adage has It: "Reprove not a scorner, lest he hate thee."-Prov. 9:7, 8.

Concerning Prayer, Jesus' law concerning prayer is exceedingly simple It is that we take the attitude of perfeet trust. "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall flud; knock, and It shall be opened unto you." "If ye then, being cyll, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more thall your Father which is in Henven give good things to them that ask llim." Entrance to the Kingdom.-The way into the Kingdom of Heaven as laid down by Jesus Is not a broad one, but a narrow one, and hard to travel. It Is natural to do not right, but wrong, The puth of the Thristlan life is up hill. Difficulties should not discourage, but lucite to renewed effort. "Straight is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there he that find it."

H. stretching away out to the Rackles and from there bending north aml south to Prince Alberta and Edmonton, Melcod and Lethbridge - whether the examination be made in any of these directions the same netivity, growth and hopefulness is observable.

The Canadian west is not only a good place to locate permanently, but It is ulso a good place to invite their relatives and friends to come to. This is the spirit that seems to milmate the west at the present time and its effects are to be seen on every hand. To enumerate the towns where handsome and substantial blocks amb residences have gone up this year would be simply to give a list of the towns and villages along the rallway lines. And this movement him not heen confined to these centers of population, but in many cases it has been overshudowed by the improvement in , farm bulblings. So far as one can see, this is no passing phase, no repetition of any temporary hount following a period of good crops and fair prices. It is a movement more spontaneous, more general, more marked than anything that has gone before, and seems to Indiente that the Great West, like Samson, bursting the encompassing hands, has awakened to a period of activity and development that will surpass anything we have known in the past and which will only be paralleled by the opening out of some of the most fertile of the western the surpass anything we have known in the past and which will only be paralleled by the opening out of some father ferms. new life. This is an inspiring and cheering spectacle, but It brings with It great responsibilities. The business menrealize this, the banks realize it, and have spread their agencies through every bustling little town clear out to the coast, the churches realize it, and one denomination alone has opened an average of about thirty new stations in each of the t two years, and will increase government departments reallze lt, and there is talk of redistribution and additional members. The educational branches realize it and new schools are springing up everywhere. Over 12,000 settlers came in from the I'nited States alone last year, and these with the people who came in from the east prove the most rigorous Westerners. They lose no thue in developing their farms, in filling their grazing lambs with stock and in every district is to be found evidences of thrift and prosperity.
